

Danny Boy

I wish I had more details for this story, because it was very interesting. Carl told me that one evening he went to a bar in New London, CT. It was a place that served food, and also had a piano bar.

Carl was sitting near the piano player, and people were signing along with the music. Suddenly, a young, handsome man entered the room. He walked directly over to the piano player and whispered something into her ear. She nodded in acknowledgement, and finished the song she was playing.

Without fanfare, or any announcement, she began playing another song. During the short introduction, everyone realized she had begun playing Danny Boy. When the verse began, this young man began singing. His voice was angelic. It was so beautiful that everyone in the bar became silent. Diners stopped eating and put down their silverware. Everyone was totally spellbound by the young man's beautiful voice.

When the song was finished, there was a thunderous round of applause. The young man simply turned around and walked out the back door. Carl wanted to know more about the singer. He dashed out the door to find the man. Carl was out the door only a few seconds after the man, yet there was no sign of him. It was as if the man had instantly evaporated.

Many years later, during one of my conversations with Awan, I learned that it was Awan who had sung Danny Boy. Awan had materialized his Spirit Body, so he appeared to be as solid as any other human being. He sang the song, and as soon as he went outside, he sped up the frequency of his body, and dematerialized.
